Sweeney Center Conference on Offshore Wind Technology will be held Wednesday, May 3, at Rowan University

GLASSBORO – The Steve Sweeney Center for Public Policy is bringing together government leaders, industry officials and academics for a May 3 conference on “Offshore Wind Technology in New Jersey: Sustainability, Emerging Markets and Policy.”

Among the top policymakers addressing the conference will be Congressman Donald Norcross (D-N.J.); Robert Asaro-Angelo, Commissioner of the N.J. Department of Labor and Workforce Development; Shawn LaTourette, Commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Protection; and Tim Sullivan, CEO of the N.J. Economic Development Authority.

Former Senate President Steve Sweeney, sponsor of the 2010 Offshore Wind Renewable Energy Credit legislation, and Giuseppe R. Palmese, Ph.D., Dean of the Henry M. Rowan College of Engineering, are the conference’s opening speakers.

Beth Christensen, Ph.D., Founding Chair of Rowan’s Environmental Science Department, and Jie Li, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Electrical and Chemical Engineering, will serve as moderators for the government and industry panels.

The conference will be held at Rowan’s Student Center Ballroom on Wednesday, May 3, from 8:30 a.m. to noon, followed by a luncheon. To be added to our mailing list for the offshore wind conference, please email SweeneyCenter@Rowan.edu.
